

Woodstock Music Collection and the CPSIA

All Woodstock Music Collection products intended for children meet all current government requirements for toy safety. All instruments either have ASTM updated test results or are in the process of being re-tested.

Everyone should be aware of the fact that the CPSC February 10, 2009 deadline for manufacturer and supplier written certification forms has been extended at least one year. Retailers that sell children's products are not required to have certificates for each item in their store or catalog. Woodstock and all other suppliers still need to meet the lead limits, mandatory toy standards and other requirements, but formal certification based on testing by an accredited laboratory is not required. Woodstock is committed to producing and selling only safe musical instruments. We are confident that all of our products are safe and conform to all government regulations and requirements.
